The Latest in the Library

Check out how the Library is reaching users in new and creative ways

Events:
The Library has been taking steps to increase user engagement and awareness by holding a variety of fun events and promotions, including a public health fair, Pokémon Go contest, Harry Potter book giveaway, and even a coffee photo contest. Look forward to more fun events in the near future. Have an idea? Let the Library know!

Books Direct:
Did you know that the Library will now ship books directly to faculty, students, and staff located outside of San Diego? Even if you cannot get to the Library, you can still get access to the entirety of the circulating book collection by taking advantage of the Books Direct service! Don't let distance stop you from getting the resources that you need.

Outreach:
One of the challenges the Library faces every day is how to raise visibility and build a sense of community around National University. To accomplish this, the Library has been focusing on outreach by increasing its marketing efforts, social media presence, campus visits, and collaboration with Student Services.

What Library users are saying...

Kristian Jamerson (SHHS Nursing Grad)
“A lot of resources that are out there for students, I was completely unaware of. Without the assistance of the library, I would have been lost, honestly. So, I’m thankful for that.”

Stephanie Selarka (SHHS Nursing Grad)
“The librarians are super helpful and facilitate all that you need here. They help you with research, and any questions you might have on any projects as well.”

Dr. Ken Goldberg (SOBM Interim Dean)
“I can’t think of a support mechanism that we have at the university that’s more important than the library.”

Dr. Mark Dannenburg (SOBM Faculty)
“I don’t think anybody appreciates how undervalued the library is. When you go to the library, they can assure you that the material you’re getting is valid research material and can be used and cited in research papers. But before that, if you don’t know what you’re doing, they can tell you how to get there.”

Student Research Fellows in the Library

The National University Library has partnered with Student Engagement & Leadership, and the School of Health and Human Services (SHHS) to create the Student Research Fellow (SRF) program – a Federal Work Study opportunity for graduate students. The SRF program embodies the National University System’s values of providing an exceptional student experience by piloting an innovative practice of collaboration between students, faculty, and staff: the NU Library will train graduate students to work as research assistants to support faculty research within the SHHS Center of Excellence. This is an exciting project that may expand to additional schools in the future!
Library Liaisons collaborate with faculty to provide an “exceptional student experience.” Do you know your Liaison?

Roadmap to Research 2.0

Writing and Researching

Have you heard about how the Writing Center and the Library are collaborating?

The Writing Center provides an amazing service to National University students with its writing tutors available online seven days a week. Students have given incredibly positive feedback about their experiences. Due to its popularity, the Writing Center has been expanding its presence with in-person tutors. Students who prefer to meet face-to-face can book an appointment with a writing tutor at different NU locations, including at the Library! This has been a widely utilized service.

In addition to meeting writing tutors at the Library, students can also attend a monthly Writers’ Retreat that is put on by the Writing Center. Every 3rd Saturday of classes, a writing tutor is available at the Library from 10AM to 3PM for writing assistance in room 231. No appointment required!

Looking for other ways to engage students and support the NU community, the Writing Center and the Library also held a Write-In event recently that proved to be very successful. Writing tutors and librarians were available for drop-in assistance, and refreshments were provided to keep students fueled. Feedback was amazing, with students asking for more events like this, so expect to see Write-Ins again in the near future!

Comments from student attendees:

- “This was wonderful!! Smiling, helpful people! Food! Coffee! Caffeine? REAL help!”
- “I can’t think of anything else you could do to make this event successful. Having the Writing Center reps and librarians available was ample and awesome!”
